Praise: The Language of Redemption Gerald Clerie

What is true praise? Author Gerald Clerie believes true praise is the result of genuine redemption through the shed blood of God's perfect Lamb, the Lord Jesus Christ. The foundation for this study is the 103rd Psalm. Clerie uses the first half of that model song of praise to show how David felt impelled to praise his God, what he meant by blessing the Lord, and why it was so important for him to engage his faculties, senses, and sentiments in extolling the Lord. At the very core of praise is the memorial building process, and for today's believer, that process must culminate in the sacrifice of the Lamb of God as portrayed and immortalized for the Church in the Lord's Supper. Continuing in the 103rd Psalm, Clerie reviews with David the benefits of redemption, touching on the value and immutability of God's marvelous promises, the mystery of divine election, and introducing the believer in Christ to his privileges and the purpose of God for him in choosing and calling him to Himself.
