You Can't Kill The Dream: People Living The Dream Ande Yakstis, Daniel Brannan

"You Can't Kill The Dream: People Living The Dream" is a book by Ande Yakstis and Daniel Brannan. Award-winning journalist Ande Yakstis walked with Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. on the historic voters rights march from Selma to Montgomery, Alabama in 1965. Yakstis, who had a memorable personal experience with Rev. King, is co-author with acclaimed newspaper editor Daniel Brannan in a remarkable new book titled: "You Can't Kill the Dream-people living the 'dream.'" The two prize-winning writers tell the amazing stories of people who are living King's dream today, in 2013, 45 years after the civil rights leader's death on April 4, 1968. King's prophetic voice is alive today in the personal stories of people in the book, said James Polk, a retired CNN senior producer who won a Pulitzer Prize in national reporting. "A remarkable and evocative series of personal portraits of ordinary people, many of whom met and knew Martin Luther King Jr., and whose lives were changed forever by his dream and his death at a critical crossroads in our nation's history," Polk said in his review of the book The compelling stories of people, many who overcame hardships in life, unfold before the reader in the pages of the book, "You Can't Kill the Dream-people living the 'dream.'"
