If you like Oliver Sacks' books, then you will love Dr. Brown's latest book. The following case histories come from the journal Dr. Gary Brown kept of his thirty years of practice in a small southern college town. Included is information on the latest research on various neuropsychological disorders and the Applied Behavioral Analysis (ABA) techniques appropriate to the behavioral problems associated with the various neuropsychological disorders. References and links to sites with additional information are also included. Of course, names and other identifying details and events have been changed in all of the cases presented here to insure confidentiality. Five of the cases in this volume have been previously published in various formats. The Journal of Behavior Therapy and Experimental Psychiatry published a scholarly account of "The Longest Running Horror Movie." Abbreviated versions of "The Longest Running Horror Movie," "Wild Child," and "Treasuring Tourette's" appeared in the online publication, The Write Brain. Another online journal, Perspectives: A Mental Health Magazine, published an early, abbreviated version of "The Trichee," and The Humanist published "The Sometimes Son."
