The Death of the Hired Man (A Play) Based on the Poem By Robert Frost Jay Reid Gould

The farmer's wife has just been told that the old "hired man" is hanging about again, hoping to be taken back. She knows that he's ill and just came home to die. Her husband is a practical man and, since the hired man is unable to do a day's work, the farmer will not have him hanging about. The frantic wife tries everything, and as the old hired man pleads, telling of all the work he'll do, her anxiety mounts. It's seldom that a play offers such superb roles or a more absorbing situation. One exterior set with cast of 2 men and 2 women.
